NYC's Animal Medical Center Strengthens Leadership Team with Appointment of New Chief Administrative Officer

Neil M. McCarthy Brings Over 35 Years of Strategic Management and Leadership Experience to the Role

(New York, N.Y.- September 27, 2019) The Animal Medical Center (AMC), the world's largest non-profit animal hospital, today announced the appointment of Neil M. McCarthy as Chief Administrative Officer. In this new position, Mr. McCarthy will report directly to AMC's Chief Executive Officer and work collaboratively with all departments and the senior management team to advance AMC's strategic direction, develop important alliances, and identify business opportunities to ensure sustainability and broaden the institution's imprint across the evolving veterinary landscape.

Mr. McCarthy served as a member of AMC's Board of Trustees for over 25 years, most recently as Chairman of the Executive Committee. Mr. McCarthy's professional career in the investment management industry spanned over 35 years in various leadership roles, at both privately-owned firms and global industry leaders including: Salem, Wade & Company, Oppenheimer Funds and Windham Capital Management. Mr. McCarthy holds a bachelor's degree in Economics from the College of the Holy Cross.

"Neil McCarthy's depth and diversity of strategic management experience, coupled with his unwavering commitment to the Animal Medical Center, makes him well positioned for the Chief Administrative Officer role," said Kathryn Coyne, Chief Executive Officer at AMC. "I am confident that Neil's strategic management and leadership skills, his demonstrated expertise in building and growing businesses, and his in-depth knowledge of our organization, will help to ensure AMC's continued legacy as a leader in veterinary medicine."

"It is truly an honor to join the Animal Medical Center at this pivotal time when the veterinary industry is evolving. Today's pace of change in the veterinary industry is exponential, and AMC's role has never been more important," said Mr. McCarthy. "I look forward to working with AMC's dedicated leadership team to identify emerging opportunities, tackle industry challenges, and help navigate AMC's continued leadership position in the veterinary industry well into the future."
